about oblix

following the enormous success of zuma & ROKA rainer becker decided to move away from japanese cuisine and culture for the first time in over a decade. in 2013 he introduced oblix, a dual dining experience on the 32nd floor of the shard – europe's tallest building.

oblix is a destination bar and kitchen offering a refined urban experience and contemporary cuisine.

located in the 32nd floor of the shard, the open kitchen proudly showcases the wood fired oven, charcoal grill and rotisserie that are the heart and soul of the oblix kitchen.

the founder

rainer becker's attention to detail and unstoppable enthusiasm are the driving force of his career and the company. rainer started his career as a chef in some of germany's most prestigious kitchens including: goethehaus in bensberg, koenigshop in munich and the hyatt regency in cologne.

in 1992 rainer was promoted to executive chef of the park hyatt in sydney. in 1994 rainer took the position of executive chef in the park hyatt tokyo – where he launched five restaurants and remained for six years.

japan fascinated rainer and he quickly immersed himself in its culture. throughout these six years, the formations of an idea that would become his global vision were formed.

the challenge of london and a return to europe beckoned and in 2002, becker's vision became reality and zuma london was born. instantly popular, the demand was so high that two years later, still restless, becker decided to develop a second brand & introduced ROKA & shochu lounge.

in 2013, he introduced oblix, a dual dining experience on the 32nd floor of the shard – europe's tallest building, offering oblix west and oblix east. the menus showcase the best produce from the kitchen's spit roast, charcoal grill and wood-fired ovens, delivered in the becker signature style of upscale, sophisticated, urban dining.

rainer becker's cuisine has gathered great respect and recognition throughout the world, yet his energy and imagination are relentless. in addition to his successful destination restaurants located in london, both zuma and ROKA continue to grow internationally.

our vision behind the oblix bar is to take culinary approach to classic cocktails using flavour as inspiration. all our creations have been re-envisioned, modified and carefully paired with premium spirits and liqueurs. by twisting creations with homemade and contemporary ingredients we aim to change the way we perceive the old standards, and thus make cocktail drinking as fun and as accessible. the method to our madness is simple: every thought, drop of liquid, taste, smell and texture is shaken, stirred or served straight up with a whole lot of passion and fun.
